Harmony: Hey, cool shades!

Melody: Yeah, I just bought these sunglasses. The yellow color shows off my nose.

Harmony: Let's go explore this vacant lot close to my home.

Melody: We could clean it up and decorate it for the holidays.

Harmony: Do you have a hoe? We can clear some of the growth and grow some crops.

Melody: Relax, we can just roam and go with the flow. We'll only throw away the discarded trash.

Harmony: You're right; it's better to leave wildlife as it is. We'll let the farmers grow the crops to sell and make money.

Melody: I have an idea. We'll stand on that mound in the middle of the lot and chant our urban wildlife rap.

Harmony and Melody:

Coast to coast
We're here to toast
Wherever we go
From California to Ohio
We are outspoken, dressed in indigo and yellow
Standing on our toes under your window
We take an oath
In a halo of growth
Nature's all around, it's very close
Just open your eyes, it's under your nose.
This isn't a hoedown;
Just two kids rapping on a mound!
