Paragraph

Autumn begins on September 21st and ends on December 20th. It is the time when the days are getting shorter and the weather is getting cooler. Deciduous trees make their food (sugar) from water, sunlight, and carbon dioxide that we humans exhale when we breathe. This process is called photosynthesis. As the light and weather changes, deciduous trees can't make much food anymore. The leaves dry up and the wind blows them off the stem and onto the ground. Some leaves just dry up and turn a dull brown, while others turn brilliant colors such as orange, yellow, red, purple, and gold.
