Readers Theatre

Colin: Hey kid! Do you want some pie?

Will: Sure. It looks delicious.

Colin: Don't be so greedy. Only take one piece.

Will: Why are you bothering me? You invited me for pie.

Colin: I said, "some pie", not all the pie.

Will: My mom let's me have all the pie at home.

Colin: It's not my fault you're spoiled.

Will: If I do a flip over a fox will you give it all to me?

Colin: No, not even if you fix my whisk and drill.

Will: What if I rid you of all you unwanted stuff?

Colin: You are my only unwanted thing right now.

Will: I don't even want your pie. It looks soggy.

Colin: No it's not. It's flakey on the outside.

Will: I'll be the judge. Let me taste.

Colin: Here you go. You'll see it's the best.

Will: This isn't such a good piece. Let me try the next one.

Colin: I swear that this piece will be better.

Will: No it's the same. I'll try the last piece just to make sure.

Colin: I made this pie myself. I don't know what could have happened.

Will: Now this is excellent. Too bad there is no more pie for you!
