Archer: When am I going to be paid?

Rigley: Instead of paying you, why don't we try an experiment?

Archer: I don't think so, without me, your business wouldn't exist.

Rigley: I'm apathetic about my business. I'm afraid that I'll just close it down.

Archer: That's unfair! Are you trying to intimidate me?

Rigley: No. You've done an extraordinary job.

Archer: This is humiliating. Why won't you pay me.

Rigley: I have major changes planned for this place.

Archer: But you want to experiment instead of paying me.

Rigley: You don't seem to understand. It would benefit you.

Archer: Maybe you need to explain it to me better.

Rigley: I just want to do something other than run this business.

Archer: So you're going to close down and I'll be out of a job.

Rigley: I'm not going to close down, but you'll be out of a job.

Archer: But that's not better for me!

Rigley: I'm going to give the business to you.

Archer: That's wonderful! Why didn't you say so?

Rigley: You wouldn't let me finish!
