Yin: Hark, who goes there? Who is trespassing on my land?

Yang: It is I, Yang. I am not trespassing. I'm flowing through the universe.

Yin: You intrigue me. What do you mean by flowing through the universe?

Yang: No one can claim ownership to a land that is so beguiling.

Yin: It's my land. It's been in my family for generations.

Yang: But the land belongs to the earth and the earth is part of the universe.

Yin: And your point is?

Yang: No one has the unlimited right to the land.

Yin: We must resolve ourselves to settle this.

Yang: Come here and caress this rock. It has feelings like a person.

Yin: Are you ignorant or just nuts?

Yang: Yummy, nuts. Do you have any?

Yin: What did I do to have you come onto my land?

Yang: It's not your land!!!!

Yin: Then, I am not here either. You are talking to a spirit.

Yang: You mean that you are haunting me?

Yin: No, because you are not here. You are flowing.

Yang: Then no one is here are we are all adrift.

Yin: Goodbye fellow drifter. It has been beautiful.
